From the tractor

Steve Troxler
Commissioner

I want to mention a special event the N.C. Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services is planning for June 5-8, 2008. We plan to host the Got to Be NC Festival at the State Fairgrounds in Raleigh, featuring tractor pulls, displays of antique farm equipment, food, music and other entertainment.

The four-day event will showcase North Carolina's agriculture heritage and our agriculture and agribusiness industry.

The Got to Be NC marketing campaign began as a grassroots effort to help consumers identify North Carolina products and commodities. Recent consumer trends have indicated many shoppers want to know where their food comes from and many prefer to buy locally grown products when available. The Got to Be NC effort is designed to tap into that trend and help consumers find North Carolina food products easily.

When we kicked off the initiative, we decorated the sides of our Food Distribution trucks with pictures of North Carolina commodities, with the trucks serving as rolling billboards for delicious locally grown products. We wanted to get people used to the Got to be NC logo and slogan. We've partnered with grocery stores and restaurants to further identify N.C. products for consumers, and from what I hear from producers, the results have been good.

We've also combined these efforts with some limited advertising to increase consumer recognition of this

Troxler reminds farmers to document freeze damage

■ Federal assistance available for freeze damage

With federal disaster assistance now available, Agriculture Commissioner Steve Troxler reminds farmers who suffered crop damage during the Easter weekend freeze to document their losses.

"When you apply for federal assistance, nothing speaks louder than pictures or video," Troxler said. "Some of the freeze damage is just now becoming evident, so it's important to keep taking photographs or shooting video of affected plants and trees."

In May, the U.S. Department of Agriculture designated 47 North Carolina counties as disaster areas because of freezing temperatures the state experienced April 6-9. The USDA also included 46 contiguous counties as part of the designation for assistance.

The designation means that eligible farmers in the 93 counties can be considered for low-interest emergency loans from the Farm Service Agency. A list of the counties is available online at www.ncagr.com/paf-fairs/freezecounties.htm.

In addition, President Bush recently signed federal legislation that provides crop production loss assistance to farmers for natural disasters that occurred in 2005, 2006 or 2007. The losses for 2007 are covered if the crop was planted before Feb. 28.

Farmers should contact the FSA office in their area, or the North Carolina FSA office at (919) 875-4800, for information about assistance programs.

Subfreezing temperatures during Easter weekend caused widespread crop damage in North Carolina. Affected crops included apples, blueberries, peaches, wheat, corn and nursery stock.

The total loss estimate currently stands at $105 million statewide, but that number could change as farmers and agriculture officials continue to assess damage.

Farmers may want to plant summer annuals to boost forage supply

April's untimely freeze reduced the state's available forage supply. Since then, drought has hindered recovery of pastures and hayfields. For livestock producers who must decide soon whether to sell animals or find alternate feed, the N.C. Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services suggests planting summer annual forages.

NCDA&CS regional agronomists Bill Yarborough and Tim Hall are advising growers to consider crops like sorghum-sudangrass hybrids or pearl millet, but also recommend they consult with a specialist about potential fertilization hazards.

Sorghum-sudan usually produces higher yields than pearl millet, except on sandy soils, where pearl millet is better suited. Under attentive management, either crop could provide supplemental feed throughout the summer. The grasses can be planted conventionally or no-till.

"In Western North Carolina, hay and forage production is down 30 to 60 percent," Yarborough said. "The damaged crops are all cool-season grasses and will not recover now, even if it rains. Forage like sorghum-sudan is good for hay or grazing and will grow throughout the summer even with limited rainfall. Under optimum conditions, it could be 12 inches high and ready for grazing within 28 days."

Yarborough and Hall caution growers to avoid over-fertilization during drought. Fertilizer will not produce a favorable growth response without moisture. In addition, there is the danger that unusually high levels of nitrates may accumulate in the forage. High levels of nitrate can be fatal to cattle.

"High nitrates in forage occur when there is not enough rain for the crop to metabolize the nitrogen it takes up. My advice

Soil testing can help with nematode problems in cucumber crop

For Charles Harden of Bertie County, managing plant-parasitic nematodes is one of the biggest challenges involved in growing cucumber pickles. Insufficient treatment jeopardizes yield. Excessive treatment undercuts profits.

The N.C. Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services is conducting a field study to help Harden, and other growers like him, find a solution that is both economical and effective.

Nematodes are microscopic roundworms prevalent in the sandy soils of Eastern North Carolina. The damage they cause to roots interferes with water and nutrient uptake, increases the need for irrigation and often leads to nutrient deficiencies. Infected plants are also more vulnerable to disease and are slower to mature.

Harden started growing cucumbers for Mount Olive Pickle Co. in the fall of 2004. When he had trouble getting a good stand, he didn’t expect nematodes to be involved. When he examined the stunted plants, however, he noticed the swollen root nodules characteristic of root-knot nematodes.

“That first crop was a disaster,” Harden said.

During the 2005 growing season, Harden proceeded cautiously and treated the soil for nematodes twice—first before the spring crop and again before the fall crop. Because this double treatment was so expensive, Harden wanted to know whether it was really necessary. That fall he turned to NCDA&CS regional agronomist Wayne Nixon for advice.

“I used a conservative, blanket approach to nematode management in 2005,” said Harden. “But then I called in Wayne to take a closer look. I wanted a more scientific evaluation.

Nixon visited Harden and toured his operation. He decided that field testing was the most reliable way to answer Harden’s questions.

“The situation with cucumber pickles is unique,” Nixon said. “Growers typically harvest two or three successive plantings in a single growing season. Therefore, they actually have an opportunity to treat the soil several times in one season.”

In March 2006, Nixon collected soil samples and had them tested for nematodes. Laboratory results indicated that several fields had potentially damaging population levels. One field had a root-knot nematode population 60 times greater than the threshold level for treatment.

Nixon set up test plots on Harden’s farm to find out whether one annual treatment could be effective, especially against extremely high populations. If so, the savings could amount to as much as $200 per acre. Results so far are encouraging, if not conclusive.

Data from 2006 indicate that a single, early-spring application of Telone II (1,3-dichloropropene) at 8 to 10 gallons per acre can give good nematode control. Nixon monitored nematode populations at regular intervals and found that they remained below threshold levels throughout the growing season. Even the most heavily infested test plots did not require a second treatment before subsequent plantings.

“A yield increase of about 17 bushels per acre is necessary to make the 10-gallon-per-acre Telone treatment cost-effective,” Nixon said. “I measured increases of 12 to 44 bushels in my test plots. Yield compensated for the cost of treatment 75 percent of the time.”

Nixon is continuing his field study throughout the 2007 growing season. By this time next year, he expects to have two years of useful data on nematode population dynamics, treatment effectiveness and yield. He also plans to evaluate whether the treatments may further enhance cucumber yield or quality by controlling other crop diseases or pests.

“For pickle-cucumber producers, striking the right balance promises to be lucrative,” Nixon said. “Each planting matures in about 35 days with a potential return of $1,200 per acre. Realizing this return is tied closely to being able to achieve cost-effective nematode management. By routinely submitting samples for testing, growers know where to focus their management efforts.”

North Carolina farmers have access to one of the most comprehensive agronomic testing and advisory services in the nation. The NCDA&CS Agronomic Division laboratories perform soil tests, nematode assays, and nutrient analyses of plant tissue, composted materials, wastes, nutrient solutions and source water. Thirteen regional agronomists are available to visit growers; evaluate suspected problems, give advice on sampling, liming and fertilization, and help identify and manage nematode problems. Visit the Agronomic Division’s Field Services Section online at www.ncagr.com/agronomi/rahome.htm for contact information.

Agronomist Wayne Nixon is available to provide advice on fertilization, nutrient management and nematode problems in Bertie, Camden, Chowan, Currituck, Gates, Hertford, Pasquotank and Perquimans counties. He can be reached by phone at (252) 426-7210 or by e-mail at wayne.nixon@ncmail.net.

Make North Carolina blueberries a part of your next meal

North Carolina blueberries are in season now, and here are some recipes to help you put N.C. blueberries on the menu. Look for locally grown blueberries in your grocery stores, farmers markets and roadside stands.

Fresh Blueberry Crumb Pie

- Topping:
1 cup hazelnuts or walnuts
2 cups all-purpose flour
1/2 cup granulated sugar
3/4 cup chilled butter (1 1/2 sticks), cut into small pieces
- Filling:
1/2 cup granulated sugar
1 1/2 teaspoons cornstarch
2 pints fresh NC blueberries

Preheat oven to 350F.
To prepare crumb crust topping, spread nuts in a medium baking pan. Roast the nuts, stirring occasionally until toasted, about 10 minutes. Remove the nuts from the oven and turn out onto a cloth towel. Rub off and discard the papery skins. Increase the temperature to 450F. Chop or process the nuts until finely ground. In a large bowl mix together the nuts, flour and sugar. Using a pastry blender or two knives, cut the butter into the flour mixture until course crumbs appear. Evenly press the half of the crumb crust/topping mixture into the bottom and sides of 8 or 9 inch tart pan. Prepare the filling in a medium bowl, mixing together the sugar and cornstarch. Gently fold in the berries. Spoon the berry mixture into the crust, spreading evenly. Sprinkle the berry mixture with the remaining crumb/crust topping. Bake until topping is golden and filling is bubbly, about 30 minutes. Transfer the pan to a wire rack to cool for 10 minutes. Serve warm.

Homemade Blueberry Jam

- 2 1/2 cups of fresh NC Blueberries
1/3 cup orange juice
3 cups sugar
1 tablespoon lemon juice
½ (3 ounces) fruit pectin
- Wash blueberries. Crush blueberries in an enamel or stainless steel pan. Add sugar and fruit juices. Mix well. Bring to a rolling boil. Boil hard for one minute, stirring constantly. Remove from heat. Stir in pectin. Ladle mixture into jars, filling to within 1/8 of tops. Seal hot sterilized jars. Refrigerate. Can be stored for 2 months. Makes 3 cups or 4 (6 ounce) jars.

Blueberry Surprise Pie

- 3 cups graham cracker crumbs
3 sticks butter
3 eggs
1 box confectioner’s sugar
4 cups fresh NC blueberries
1/2 cup sugar
4 heaping tablespoons flour
1/2 teaspoon cinnamon
3/4 cup water
1 large cool whip
Chopped pecans
Blueberries for garnish

Mix flour, sugar, cinnamon and water in saucepan. Stir in blueberries. Cook over medium-low heat until blueberries are cooked and mixture is thick like pie filling. Cool completely. Mix crumbs and 1 stick of melted butter. Press into a 9x13 inch dish. Beat eggs; add 2 sticks of soft butter and 1 box confectioner’s sugar. Mix well and spread over crust. Layer with blueberry filling. Top with cool whip. Garnish with chopped pecans and blueberries. Chill and serve.

Lemony Blueberry Muffins

- 1 cup flour
1/2 cup sugar
1/4 cup wheat germ
1 1/2 teaspoon baking powder
1/4 cup milk
1/4 cup lemon juice
1/2 teaspoon lemon extract
1 egg, slightly beaten
2 tablespoon oil
3/4 cup fresh NC blueberries
8 teaspoons sugar for sprinkling

Mix dry ingredients. Mix liquids. Combine and mix well. Fold in blueberries. Measure into paper-lined muffin pans. Sprinkle each muffin with 1 teaspoon sugar. Bake at 400F for 20 minutes.

Tobacco Trust Fund seeking grant proposals

The Tobacco Trust Fund Commission is issuing a call for proposals for projects that support the agricultural economy in North Carolina, especially in areas affected by the tobacco buyout.

The commission is looking for projects that match its focus in any of five areas: diversification initiatives, natural resource and farmland preservation, skill and resource development, increasing farm profitability and community economic development. The maximum grant amount available in the 2007 grant cycle will be $300,000. Priority will be given to projects based on the size of area and number of people affected.

“The rural economy in North Carolina continues to adjust and redevelop in a post-tobacco buyout era,” said Billy Carter, TTFC chairman. “The Tobacco Trust Fund Commission will continue, with this grant cycle, in helping members of our agricultural family address these needs.”

The commission awards grants to public and nonprofit agencies developing programs to lessen unemployment and stabilize local tobacco-dependent economies and tax bases. Grant applications are available online at www.tobaccotrustfund.org and are due Aug. 1. The commission should announce grant recipients by the end of October.

The General Assembly created the Tobacco Trust Fund Commission in 2000 to help soften the financial impact to farmers and tobacco-related businesses caused by the sharp decline of tobacco in the agricultural economy. The commission’s funding comes from monies paid by cigarette manufacturers under the 1998 Master Settlement Agreement. Technical assistance in completing the 2007 application is available by calling commission staff at (919) 733-2160, or by e-mail at tobaccotrustfund@ncmail.net.

Troxler talks milk at Dairy Day

Troxler tours Sandhills peach orchards

Agriculture Commissioner Steve Troxler recently visited with peach growers in the Sandhills area to survey damage from the Eastern weekend freeze. At top, Art Williams, left, of Kalawi Farms in Eagle Springs, talks with Troxler about the trees and the losses he sustained from the freeze. Troxler visited orchards in Moore, Montgomery and Richmond counties. Some farmers were able to save some of their peach blossoms that were near wind turbines that circulated warm air through the orchards. Bottom photo, Troxler and peach grower Garrett Johnson look for peaches that survived the freeze.
